

ALT 27 New Novels in African Literature Today

This is a seminal work that discusses the validity of the perception that the new generation of African novelists is remarkably different in vision, style, and worldview from the older generation. The contention is that the older generation novelists who were too close to the colonial period in Africa had invariably made culture-conflict and little else their dominant thematic concern while the younger generation novelists are more versatile in their thematic preoccupations, and are more global in their vision and style. Do the facts in the novels justify and validate these claims? The 13 papers in this volume have been carefully selected to consider these issues. Brenda Cooper a renowned literary scholar from Cape Town writes on Chimamanda Ngozi Adichies Purple Hibiscus, while Charles Nnolim writes about Adichies more recent novel Half of a Yellow Sun; Omar Sougou of Universite Gaston Berger, Senegal discusses ambivalent inscriptions in Buchi Emechetas later novels; Clement Okafor of the University of Maryland, addresses the theme of racial memory in Isidore Okpewhos Call Me By My Rightful Name, juxtaposed between the world of the old and the realities of the present. Joseph McLaren, Hofstra University, New York, discusses Ngugis latest novel, Wizard of the Crow, while Machiko Oike, Hiroshima University, Japan looks at a new theme in African adolescent literature, youth in an era of HIV/AIDS. There is abundant evidence of the contrasts and diversities which characterize the African novel not only geographically, but also ideologically and generationally.
