

A Slower, Lower Love

When running isn't the answer, Cait O'Kelley loved Bryce Delaney with all of her heart. But loving him scared the hell out of her. Cait didn't want to settle for being married to a cop and having his children. She wanted more. Unfortunately, more came with a price. After leaving her small home town for a more glamorous life and working her way up the corporate ladder, a whirlwind affair with the boss's son tears Cait's world apart. On the brink of losing everything she's worked for, she has to make a decision, and going back seems impossible. After eight years of living without her, Bryce finds himself tasked with the job of watching over Cait during her weeklong stay at her parents' beach house in Bethany. She's come there to sort out her life and while she's contemplating her future, Bryce and Cait discover the fireworks are still there. But can they ever go back to where they once were? As his secrets begin to surface, Bryce sees only one way to save her. He disappears without a trace leaving Cait behind to pick up the pieces and deal with a whole host of new problems that she can neither explain away or hide. Can you find middle ground? With Bryce out of the picture, his brother, Kurt, finds what he's dreamed of for a lifetime handed to him on a silver platter. After watching Cait and Bryce toy with each other for fifteen years, once Bryce disappears, Kurt eagerly steps up to the plate. But is he strong enough to ground Cait and keep her from making yet another mistake? And which brother will win her heart and show her that a slower lower love is enough?
