

Coastal Engineering 1998: Conference Proceedings : June 22-26, 1998, Falconer Hotel, Copenhagen, Denmark

This three-volume proceedings contains over 270 papers presented at the 26th International Conference on Coastal Engineering. The proceedings is divided into five parts: characteristics of coastal waves and currents; long waves and storm surges; coastal structures; coastal processes and sediment transport; and coastal, estuarine and environmental problems. Papers cover such topics as the effects of wind, waves, storms and currents, as well as the study of sedimentation, erosion, and beach nourishment. Special emphasis is given to case studies of completed engineering projects. With the inclusion of both theoretical and practical information, these papers provide the civil engineer and professionals in related fields with a broad range of information on coastal engineering and coastal processes affecting design and operations in the coastal zone.
