

Eschatology in Galatians: Rethinking Pauls Response to the Crisis in Galatia (Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen Zum Neuen Testament 2)

After surveying diverse scholarly approaches to Pauls eschatology in Galatians, Yon-Gyong Kwon concludes that a satisfactorily coherent reading of Pauls argument has not been established yet. Focusing on Pauls own statements about the Galatian crisis, the author also demonstrates that the letter is Pauls pastoral engagement with the backsliding Galatians rather than his theological altercation with his opponents. Paul perceives this crisis in a conspicuously future-oriented perspective. Accordingly, Pauls theological argument reveals the same, futuristic perspective. The main focus of Yon-Gyong Kwons study lies on this perspective: justification as an eschatological hope (ch. 3); sonship as a median motif (ch. 4); promise and inheritance as a hope yet to be fulfilled (chs. 5 and 6). Pauls christological argument does not show any discernible realized eschatological point of view. Instead, the apostles emphasis falls on the incompatibility of Christ and the law on the one hand, and the crucial importance of the role of the Spirit on the other (ch. 7). In the final chapter the author demonstrates how the future-oriented perspective of Paul can explain the way Paul deals with the crisis, avoiding the tensions or contradictions that weaken the case for the traditional readings.
