

Immortelle and Bhandaraa Poems

IMMORTELLE AND BHANDAARAA POEMS is Lelawattee Manoo-Rahmings second collection of poetry, shortlisted for the International Proverse Prize for Literature (2009) Inspired by the Hindu philosophy of reincarnation, many of the poems in this new collection are written in memory of loved ones. But, in the same way that the orange and red flowers of the Immortelle tree flame the forests and plains of Trinidad, these poems are brightened with imagery of hope and rebirth. The brilliant flowers of the Immortelle tree also evoke the flames in Hindu cremation ceremonies. Thirteen days after the cremation, Bhandaraa puja is performed to help the newly-released soul depart this earthly plane. These poems are like the Bhandaraa prayers that feed the souls of the dead and the living. Manoo-Rahmings Immortelle and Bhandaraa Poems is filled with scenes from the poets physical landscape which spans the Caribbean, from The Bahamas, her present home, to Trinidad, the land of her birth. The language of these sensual poems is a syncretism of her East Indian-derived Bhojpuri Hindi and her Trinbagonian creole, peppered with nuances of the Bahamian vernacular. This syncretism is reflected in the themes of the poems. Although many of the poems deal with Indo-Caribbean anthropology, the collection embraces other cultures and religions which are present in the Caribbean, and speaks to the fluidity in philosophy that can exist and flourish, in such plural societies. Immortelle and Bhandaraa Poems is a celebration of life and a testament to the lives of those who have passed on. Stunning variety of language and range of reference International Proverse Prize Judges Lelawattee Manoo-Rahming is a poet and mixed media artist of great range and complexity; all of the world and its myriad experiences are her concern. These collected works range in both content and tone from the sacred to the profane, from grief to joy, and the journey both in its language and vision is impressive and courageous. Manoo-Rahming guides the reader through national, regional, and familial history while simultaneously revealing, mourning and celebrating her diverse cultural inheritance.
