

Kola is Gods Gift: Agricultural Production, Export Initiatives and the Kola Industry in Asante and the Gold Coast, c. 1820-1950 (Western African Studies)

Kola is a food-drug, a substance considered neither food nor medicine, but - like coffee, tea, coca and tobacco - is used to induce flights of fancy. It is incorporated into rites of passage, and ceremonies to cement treaties and contracts; its medicinal properties were first recognised outside Africa in the twelfth century; and it is a legal and popular stimulant among West African Muslims.
