

Life a la Mode: A novel

What do you do when your little sister has been engaged six times, your mother is dating a sixty-five-year-old man obsessed with fish, your father has run off from a family reunion with a woman who claims to be a distant cousin, and your ex-husband keeps stopping by with little gift-wrapped parcels of spicy food? Holly Philips doesn't really know what to do next. Holly's pharmacist friend Maria has some of the answers, and a few cold capsules just in case. And Holly's officemate and fellow production editor Tom has a few ideas he'd like to share with Holly, if only he can bring himself to speak around her, and only when their mocking boss, Monique, isn't too close by. Will Tom ask Holly out, and will it be for more than lunch at The Jelly Deli across from their Greenwich Village office? Holly's about to find out about Tom, about her sister Janies passion for all things bridal, about Maria's weak spot for men who get their hands dirty, about her mother's intended four-month-long African safari, about her ex-husband's plans for their future, and about long-lost Dad, who may not be so lost after all.
