

Melanesian Religion and Christianity (Melanesian Mission Studies, 4)

This book arose from a series of seminar presentations at a workshop on Melanesian Religion and Christianity held at Alexishafen, Madang Province, back in 1996. Edited by Professor Garry Trompf, it explores issues that are crucial and most demanding of attention in contemporary Melanesia and about the value of straightforward, hands-on and less theoretical work in a culturally diverse and turbulent region. This book honours the claim that the noble traditions of Melanesian societies are worth preserving, while acknowledging the massive shifts taking place among them today.
