

The Shipment and Lear

Lees way of subverting expectations leaves us questioning our own latent assumptions and desires about theatre, race, death and entertainment. She understands and exploits the unique strengths of her medium: the ability to viscerally connect with an audience. The Economist Experimental Korean American theatre artist Young Jean Lee has been called one of the best experimental playwrights in America (Time Out New York). This volume contains two of her recent works: In The Shipment, Lee provides a provocative look at African-American identity in our not-yet post-racial society. The New York Times calls this take on cultural images of black America a subversive, seriously funny new theater piece. Ms. Lee wields sharp, offbeat humor to point up the clichés, distortions and absurdities (Charles Isherwood, New York Times). LEAR is Lees own version of Shakespeares tragedy, focusing on the kings three daughters. A production in which Lear himself never appears, LEAR is a wacky blend of To be or not to be, Beckett, and Pirandello full of exhilarating, illuminating moments (Village Voice). Young Jean Lee has written and directed shows in New York with Young Jean Lees Theater Company and toured her work to over twenty cities around the world. Her plays include Straight White Men, Were Gonna Die, Untitled Feminist Show, The Shipment, Lear and Songs of the Dragons Flying to Heaven. Awards include two Obies, the Festival Prize of the Zuercher Theater Spektakel, a Prize in Literature from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a Guggenheim Fellowship and a Doris Duke Artist Award.
