

Thought Clothed with Sound: Augustines Christological Hermeneutics in De doctrina Christiana (International Theological Studies)

The present study discusses the symbiotic relationship between Augustines hermeneutical insights and Christology. It focuses on the first three books of De doctrina Christiana in their given sequence. Since Augustines hermeneutics implies a Christological epistemology, the author approaches De doctrina Christiana through Augustines early epistemological treatises Contra Academicos and De Magistro. The former defends the possibility of certain knowledge, and the latter explains how this knowledge is gained through the illuminative activity of the Inner Teacher. The work also integrates linguistic signification in ancient philosophy which prepares the ground for understanding Augustines science of signs and the fundamental Christological analogy in doc. Chr. 1.13. This study exemplifies that Augustines whole semiotic system is constructed around the fundamental Sign, the humanity of Christ, which in its hypostatic union with the divine nature enables one to know God through Christ the human being.
